REFUSE TO MAKE ARREST

Police Tell Relatives of Assaulted Politician to "Forget It"

Although Joseph Fletcher, 217 South Ninth street, an Eighth Ward election judge, is charged with inflicting serious injuries on George A. Fletcher, Sixth street, yesterday, the police have refused to arrest Fletcher.

The trouble was started by a quarrel between a grandson of Dykes and one of Fletcher's relatives. According to Mrs. Charlotte Kenneth, 225 South Ninth street, a daughter of Dykes, the attack made by Fletcher on her father occurred when the latter, accompanied by Mrs. Kenneth and her husband, Edward Kenneth, were walking along Ninth street between Spruce and Locust streets.

2000 MESSAGES ARE SENT

No Censor Will Interfere, No Matter What Bond Buyers Tell Wilhelm

If Kaiser Wilhelm reads half of the 2000 messages penned for his special benefit by fourth Liberty Loan subscribers at the Statue of Liberty booth, he will have some hint of the "warmth" of feeling Americans have for him.

Some of them are couched in more or less polite terms, while others tersely tell him "where to get off." Miss Martha Brown, of Jenkintown, frankly wrote: "If I'd say what I thought of you, I'd be arrested."

"We're fighting to beat a black-headed outcast and his people, conceived in hell, born in Germany," wrote George J. Mitchell, of 1223 South Wilton street.

"I wish you a slow, torturing death at stake," was the message of Louis J. Tawa, of 6824 Lincoln avenue, Germantown, given with his fourth subscription to this loan.

FOUR BOYS IN FRANCE FROM SPRUCE ST. HOME

Three Wilsons and Their Brother-in-law Are in Forefront of Big Drive on Germans—Paul Writes of Experiences

THERE is a modest little home at 5523 Spruce street. Although it is just like the other cozy-looking dwellings in the row, in the eyes of Uncle Sam it is perhaps the most important. From this home Mr. and Mrs. William M. Wilson four young men have gone to fight for the stars and stripes.

They are Paul M. Wilson, his brothers, Robert M. and William, Jr., and Louis A. Ferry, a brother-in-law. All of them are now right in the front of the big battle charge.

Paul Wilson, who is eighteen years old, is with Headquarters Company, 110th Infantry. He enlisted last September. Robert is with Company K, Pioneer Infantry, and enlisted last July. William is with Company C, 146th Infantry, and has been a soldier since last April. Ferry is with the quartermaster corps.

Up to the present Paul has had the most action, and the more he gets the more he seems to like it. Listen to part of his letter home:

"I wish you a slow, torturing death at stake," was the message of Louis J. Tawa, of 6824 Lincoln avenue, Germantown, given with his fourth subscription to this loan.

"Max's confusion and death come to all enemies of democracy," such was the wish of W. P. Cunningham, 4958 Haverford avenue.

"Fred Koch, of 682 West Coulter street, wrote: 'God help you when we cross the Rhine.'"

James W. Close, of 2269 South Twenty-second street hoped the Kaiser would spend his next vacation in the hottest place.

"At last we've got you on the run. We won't quit until we send you to your just deserts," so A. G. K. wrote to the Kaiser from 5532 Osage avenue, sent his greetings.

Charles M. Schwab, E. T. Stotesbury and various other prominent men and women of the Philadelphia district were among the first to send shelligrams to Germany. Their messages were no less "heated" than the many later ones.

"Subscriptions to the Statue of Liberty booth to date total $287,900. The booth is under the direction of the Emergency Aid committee, Mrs. Norman MacLeod, chairman.

DEATH REVEALS ROMANCE

Hog Island Workman Was Wealthy Harry's Son

Death of Harry A. Rheinstrom, son of a Cincinnati millionaire, in the Misericordia Hospital following an accident at Hog Island where he was a workman, recalls his elopement with a burlesque actress in 1910.

Edna Loftus, an English burlesque actress, became his bride on January 4, 1910. Previous to that he had been known because of his liberal expenditures of a fortune left him by his father, a distiller.

Rheinstrom met Miss Loftus in New York. The Rheinstrom family tried to stop the marriage by having the heir before probate court on the charge of insanity. Rheinstrom was sent to a private sanitarium at College Hill. Miss Loftus had Rheinstrom released on a writ of habeas corpus, and they eloped to Independence, Ky. A chicken ranch near Los Angeles became the home of the couple, but frequent quarrels are said to have led to their separation.

Rheinstrom came east while his wife stayed in California.

TAKES PICTURES OF HIS CAPTIVES

Philadelphia Machine Gunner, Samuel Mehr, Sends Them Home

ALSO GERMAN MONEY

Foes Glad to Be Captured, He Declares, Having Fought Long Enough

Like the American Indian of the western plains, who scalped his victims as proof positive of their downfall, one of Pershing's machine gunners is not only capturing Germans on the western front, but insists on their handing over their photographs as souvenirs of the event.

"These evidences of heroism, in addition to German mark notes, coins and postcards, have been received by Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Mehr, of 1810 West Susquehanna avenue. From their son, who has been seeing active service on the firing line for the last six months, he is Samuel Mehr, of Company B, Fifteenth Machine Gun Battery, A. I. P., and he has a wholesome contempt for the treacherous German, who he declares is "easy to beat."

Mehr, who is twenty-five years old and unmarried, declares that the Allies are winning everywhere and looks for the war to end in a short time. The Germans, he declared, surrender at every opportunity and are apparently tired of warfare.

One German he took captive threw his helmet away and declared that four years was long enough to fight for the Kaiser. The boche added that he hoped the Americans would reach Berlin and capture the royal family.

INTERNED GERMAN BUY BONDS

Prisoners at Fort Oglethorpe Get Permission to Invest

Washington, Oct. 17.—Interned German prisoners at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., are buying Liberty Bonds.

They expressed their desire to do so to the authorities of the internment camp, and A. Mitchell Palmer, custodian of alien property, gave his consent.

A great number of these men were formerly in the German marine service, serving on board ocean liners plying between this country and Germany before America's entrance into the war.

Samuel Mehr, of 1810 West Susquehanna avenue, one of Pershing's machine gunners, not only captured the above Germans, but made them hand over their photographs as souvenirs of the event

U. S. TO BUILD DRYDOCKS

Piez Says Two Will Be Constructed at This Port

The Emergency Fleet Corporation will have constructed ten or more dry-docks of the latest type and of capacity sufficient to accommodate the largest cargo carriers afloat.

According to Charles Piez, vice president of the corporation, this is not merely being considered, but actually is going to be done.

The docks will have a capacity of from ten to twenty or more tons. The wings will be built of steel and the pontoons of pine wood.

Each pontoon will be 116 feet long, and the number of pontoons used in each dock will be regulated by the size of the dock.

PNEUMONIA KILLS SON; ANOTHER IS WOUNDED

Police Sergeant Davis Gets Bad News of Boys in Service

An hour after a letter told Street sergeant William Davis, of the Sixty-fifth street and Woodland avenue police station, that his son, Sergeant William M. Davis, of the marine corps, had returned to his country, wordless, a telegram advised him that another son, Lee W. Davis, an acting sergeant, had died in Pittsburgh of pneumonia.

Acting Sergeant Lee W. Davis had been selected to attend the University of Pittsburgh and later was placed in charge of a squad of thirty men doing motor repair work. He contracted pneumonia while on duty and died Tuesday night in a Pittsburgh hospital.

The letter from the wounded son was sent from the Charleston Navy Yard. The marine corps sergeant informed his father that he had been wounded in action and had been invalided home.

Street Sergeant Davis has a third son in the naval court defense reserve.
